The SGA election controversy: Be aware of both sides

I have walked the hallowed hall of Laurentian University for three years now, going with the flow, just another face in the crowd. I've read Lambda weekly, counting on our paper to keep this off-campus student informed about events in our academic world.

I've followed the SGA elections yearly and, like a good little student, always cast my vote. I find it ironic that after the two week campaign every spring, during which I am inundated with posters, flyers, promises and heated speeches, I neither see nor hear from my elected officials again.

With a new found interest in politics, I followed this year's SGA election closely. I learned what I could about the candidates and their platforms. I listened intently to their speeches and got more information than I bargained for. I decided who I'd vote for right then and there and did not deviate from my decision.

The March 11 issue of Lambda brought into the open a "behind-the-scenes scandal" of that election in an article written by Chris Jose Barnes. The article not only surprised me, (and not for the reasons you might expect), but it disappointed me as well. The major scandal apparently revolves around the issue of double voting. Am I surprised that this occurred? Not a bit. Every year on voting day I've heard comments from students pertaining to the fact that they could, and maybe would, double vote. They could because there are several polling stations and each one has a master list of SGA members. With a little thought, it soon becomes obvious that one polling station doesn't know what the other is doing, so why not vote twice? This same reason is valid for why they would double: there is little possibility of getting caught and they could give their favourite candidate a better chance of winning.

What really surprises me is that of the 1300 votes cast in the election only three people were found to have double voted. I would have expected a much higher number.

The article goes on to state that our President-elect, Simon Chapelle, being one of the three who committed the "horrendous" crime of double voting, should immediately be disqualified from his newly acclaimed position. Here is where my disappointment in the article, and indeed in the "behind-the-scenes" action, comes into play. The report of the SGA Board meeting left me speechless with the self-important, vindictive, lynch-mob mentality that came across in the reported results. I can not believe they are making a federal case out of this! Hell, let's have a trial by jury for the three desperadoes who dared to vote twice! On second thought, to hell with the trial - we'll just hang 'em high right here and now!

The point I'm trying to make is that this so-called "scandal" is being blown out of proportion. The only thing these three students, including Simon Chapelle, are guilty of is an error in judgment. Yes, they made a mistake. They are human after all. What I would really like is to ask the members of the SGA Board is how squeaky-clean they themselves are. Haven't any of you folks ever made a mistake? An error in judgment? A boo-boo? No?

I would like to ask if anyone ever considered the fact that maybe, just maybe, these three students believed in their chosen candidates and wanted to see them have a chance to do some good? Is it a crime to believe in someone? To support someone? If this is what our world is coming to - please stop it, I want to get off.

I don't know what life is like these days for our terrible double voters. Would any of you care to enlighten us as to how your worlds have fallen apart or how people are attempting to ban your criminal presence from their saintly auras?

You've read this far so you've heard what I've been saying. Don't let all the hype and hoopla fool you into seeing anything that isn't there. Don't buy into this so-called scandal. Remember that we all make mistakes. Think about it and decide how you will vote.

Another campaign and subsequent election is under way with voting on the V.P. External position occurring on March 24 and 25. On the same ballot will be a referendum question as whether Simon Chapelle should or should not take the office of President for the SGA Board in the 93-94 school year. Please make up your own minds on this one, without any biased interference, and I know you will make the right decision.

Beverly Ylitalo

An Open Letter To All Students

In the previous issue of Lambda, there appeared an article about Simon Chapelle's controversial double vote. This matter should be of great concern to this University community as there will be an affirmation question regarding Mr. Chapelle's present position of President elect on March 24th and 25th. The question will ask us whether we think Simon Chapelle should take the office of President for the SGA Board 93-94.

In making this decision, there are some key points which must be brought to our attention about Mr. Chapelle's credibility as an honest leader. The most significant of these points is the inconsistency in his claims as to why he voted twice. Mr. Chapelle originally claimed that his reason for voting twice was to show the discrepancies in the electoral system. Later, he said that he voted twice due to suspicions that he had spoiled his ballot. In yet another instance, he was quoted as saying he voted twice because "he was able to."

Second, it should be noted that Mr. Chapelle was quoted regarding the vote for his disqualification from the position of President elect: "If you can come up to me and prove that you (anyone on the board) voted NO, drinks are on me."

Thirdly, Simon Chapelle's campaign appeared primarily based on irrelevant arguments for the students to vote for him, as shown by campaign signs such as "I like Star Trek" and "Don't eat yellow snow."

Hopefully, after reading this article, any sensible student will make the sensible choice in the referendum on March 24th and 25th by saying NO to Simon Chapelle!

An Open Letter To All Males Who Feel Threatened By Equal Rights (i.e. Angelo, Derek and Marty)

Being a woman today is not an easy task to accomplish. They have been mistreated and discriminated against decade after decade. At one time, men were told to beat their wives at least once a day even if there was no reason to. Women were told to stay home where "they belonged." Has it been easy for us to survive in this male dominated world? Of course not. That's why there's a women's week. Because women have fought and fought against discrimination and have finally been given a chance to show what they can contribute to society. Don't men celebrate when finally win at something they strove to be the best at?

I have to give Angelo, Marty and Derek credit though. It takes a lot of guts to write an article that could cause such a commotion. Not that what they said isn't true. Being a woman, I surprisingly found myself agreeing with much of what they said in the letter directed at feminists and male bashers.

The incident at Inco was unfortunate and I must say that the women did not handle it very well. It's not like the company had planned a ploy against women or anything. Forcing them to either leave or go underground, I'm sure, was not a decision they made with great enthusiasm.

According to the men's top ten list, I guess I'm not much of a woman. You may not believe this, but I often pay for a date (meaning that things are usually well evened out; as a matter of fact, I hate anyone paying for me); I would fight in a war if it meant protecting my country or anything else of importance; I open doors for men quite often; I move around furniture and ask men for their opinion; I give up my seats for old gentlemen on the bus; I carry all my own packages no matter how heavy; if it's my car, I get it when it's raining; I've asked men on dates; I don't run up outrageous charges on my credit card; and if I loved a man enough I would let him jump off the ship first.

Which brings me to my YOU CHALLENGED US TO NAME 10 INFLUENTIAL WOMEN WITH-

OUT LOOKING AT MY HISTORY BOOK TOP TEN LIST:

- 10) Emily Stowe (first woman doctor)
- 9) Elsie Gregory MacGill (aeronautical engineer)
- 8) Margaret Atwood (if you don't know, you don't belong in school)
- 7) Bertha Wilson (first woman in Supreme Court)
- 6) Rigoberta Menchu (Nobel Peace Prize Winner, 1992)
- 5) Ellen Fairclough (first Canadian woman in the Federal Cabinet)
- 4) Alamanda Walker-Marchand (founded the French Canadian Women's Federation)
- 3) Elisabeth Smellie (first woman colonel in the Canadian Army)
- 2) Alice Wilson (fought 40 years to be recognized as a geologist)
- 1) Dr. Miranda (James) Barry (dressed as a man until her death in order to be able to practice medicine)

HAPPY?

Just Pennies A Glass.

Regarding the ten dollar All You Can "Drink" Purple Jesus Party at Huntington Friday, we the disgruntled drinkers of SSR would like to thank you for showing us the "light". We know one does not need alcohol to have a good time, as that point was surely proven Friday night. At just pennies a glass, we also discovered how much money we can save by drinking watered down Kool-Aid on the weekends.

Now in the works is a fifteen dollar All You Can Drink Brita Water Party. When all the details are worked out, we will be sure to return the invitation, you will then know what a real drink is. We never realized how much exercise one gets from making a trip to the bathroom every five minutes from drinking fifteen glasses of Kool-Aid. Imagine after all of this, still being sober. Maybe if some of you would have put some Kool-Aid, we would have actually had a good time!

The disgruntled bloated purple tongued reformed drinkers of SSR! P.S. We did write this letter sober as it was composed immediately after leaving your Freshie party! Thanks again! XO!

A Response Letter To Angelo, Marty and Derek

After reading your letter on your obvious misunderstanding of feminism, I felt compelled to respond. Although I am not an expert on all the issues, I do consider myself a feminist and have taken this opportunity to try to clear up some of your misconceptions about what the struggle for women is. It is not, at least for my feminist friends and I, what you call male bashing. In fact, it is your kind of attitude that makes me angry, because it proves that you haven't tried to understand the real issues. I realize that you are not alone, there are many men and women who are either under- or mis-educated about the feminist struggle. Using your examples, I will try to make you aware of how I understand them.

You commented on women's studies and women in history. Incorporating women's studies into curriculum is important because, as you stated yourselves, it has so far been focused on men. In other words, the roles of women in history have been left out — not that they didn't participate but that their efforts were seen as less important than the men's. Your challenge of naming "ten influential and/or famous women without looking at a history book" proves this; if women had been included in the history in the first place, they would be present in the book and therefore anyone would be able to name ten women as easily as they can name men. (By the way, The Suffragists, Nellie McClung and Madame Curie are women that I can remember off the top of my head, as being a few of the women who have been included.)

You questioned as to "why there is a week dedicated to violence against women", when, as you pointed out, "the murder rate of men is twice that of women". Your ignorance on this issue was simply appalling to me. Violence against women is not as simple as comparing how many women to how many men were murdered. As troubling as I find both those statistics, violence against women is far more pervasive in our society than is violence against men. Women are raped, assaulted, threatened, intimidated, beaten and abused in public and in their own homes every day. And if they are not living the reality of it, they are living the in the reality of its presence. A man walks down the street at night with the fear of having his wallet stolen, a woman walks down the same street with the hope that all they want is her money. This is violence against women, and there is a week dedicated to it because society tends to ignore, as you do, its true ramifications.

You noted that the male office workers accepted to work in the mines and the female workers "screamed discrimination." I do not know how accurate you are on this point. The way I understood the issue was not as women refusing to do the work, but as office staff, experienced and trained for years in clerical work, raising questions about being given an ultimatum to do a dangerous, skilled job without the necessary training.

And, although I know your conclusion "that feminists want to be treated equally only when it is advantageous to them" is incorrect, there are many people/groups today who do seem to change the rules to suit themselves, be they men or women.

Which brings me to your list of "Top Ten Things To Do If A Woman Really Wants To Be Equal". These suggestions I find irrelevant because as a feminist, they are hugely unimportant compared to the real issue.

However, you brought them up, so I will clarify: on your point of paying for a date — traditionally, men paid the date yes, because traditionally men had the money. (If women weren't working where would they get the resources?) However, today, with women working (although generally earning less, I might add), it is possible for us to pay for the date, and many of us have.

You suggested an all-female army. May I suggest it has been a system of men who have fought to keep women out of the army. Although not in the frontline, many women worked in the hospitals behind the lines and back home making ammunition and clothing. Their efforts must not be seen as unimportant. And as recently as the war in Kuwait, women served at the front. There are many other women currently in the Canadian Forces, waiting to serve in any capacity.

Going on you listed women as opening doors for men, giving up bus seats to men, carrying the heaviest grocery bag, getting the car in the rain, moving the furniture and waiting until last to leave a sinking ship. These things are really lame, even for you. It is my hope that men and women who are doing these things for each other, not because of our sex but out of love and respect for each other as fellow human beings.

Personally as a woman, I couldn't care less whether you hold the door for me or not. But as a person, I appreciate the gesture; just as I appreciate your taking the heavy bag because doing so might be less strenuous for you.

Lastly, you note that men should be let to run up charges on credit cards.

My comment is simple. Financial irresponsibility is not sex-based. I know a few men who can't be trusted when it comes to money either.

In conclusion, I would like to briefly summarize feminism and what it means to me. Feminism is not an attack on men. It is however an attack on an oppressive system run by men, which to this point has been considered acceptable.

Feminists strive to create an awareness of the inadequacies and inequalities of this system, through examples of their own experiences. We do this not only for ourselves but for everyone — children, minorities, homosexuals, etc. and men. As women, however, we can only truly comment on our own experiences within the system based on our reality.

Feminist philosophy also holds that you, as men, living in the same oppressive society, have your own reality. And several authors have written on how the "feminist" concepts can be applied to men's experience. (See Michael Kaufman and Michael Kimmel). Rather than reacting so defensively to feminism, you might take some time to seriously consider its claims. If everyone educated themselves into the real issues and exactly what they mean on a grander scale, rather than on an individual, we would get closer to making society a better place to be — for all.

Banned In The LU Pub

by Gabe Bélanger

I was banned from the LU pub. Banned from the LU pub. Obvious questions such as (1) Who'd you knockout?, (2) How much damage did you cause?, (3) How long 'til the pool table is repaired? (4) It was that dried up wench, eh? arise. And contrary to logic, the only answer achieving a positive response is (4). Yes, I was banned from the LU pub by the LU pub wench.

Please believe my words aren't overly harsh.

Recently, at the local monopoly - pub (or stylishly known as "The Pub Down Under") an instance of incompetence was witnessed. It was an view of the place I used to frequent back in first year. This instance has changed my status from 'regular' to 'banned criminal'.

I'm not another loser who'll miss the pub but one with a single piercing, poignant question. What's the deal? I'm totally guilty of chucking a nickel at the waitress as her tip. This and hysterical laughter at all that happened, when out of her full view. This, it seems, has me banned.

It's clearly a personal matter. The problem is, short of groveling, I can't win. Can't say I enjoy this part of the Laurentian experience. Better change. Is this dastardly enough to get a lifetime ban?

In my defense, I can cite her actions at the time of my actions. The waitress we used, upon seeing my laughter, stormed out from behind the counter to show us what was up. The woman threw the nickel at my friend from ten feet away. Apparently, he deserved it - it was his beer that I bought! She then started to mouth off to both of us. Her concern could have only been with me.

She proceeded to argue with my buddy. This I could not stomach. I got him to stop arguing and squared off. My game plan was to reason, hoping she'd catch on, à la monkey see, monkey do. It didn't even come to pass. I see now there was never a hope. it was her time to rag. Hey, go for it!

Because I spoke on my behalf (politely), it was quickly decided I was to be kicked out. No problem, I don't like diaper-boy pubs anyhow. I left.

I returned about 3 weeks later and it happened again. I was kicked out because she saw me there. I'm in the blue book. Oooooooh! The reasons for my dismissal were two-fold: one, I disrespected her and two, I called her a 'fuckin' bitch' which was later changed to a 'silly bitch'.

The questions I hope to have answered are these: 1) Should I be banned? and 2) Should she be banned? I don't think I have to tell you my opinion. So, what's your opinion?

Answer to Concerned Friends

This is in response to the letter signed by "Concerned Friends", which appeared in the March 11th, 1993 edition of Lambda, regarding a Pub incident on Saturday, February 27, 1993.

Understanding the severity of the accusation, a Pub committee was held on Thursday March 11th /93. Pub committee members Romeo Bertoli, Director of Services, Paddy Blenkinsop, Student Services, Ted Clarke, SGA President and Steve Smith, VP Finance were present.

A full detailed report was presented to the Pub committee by Pub Management. The Pub committee would like to meet with the as yet to be identified persons involved and have them provide the necessary details to complete this investigation.

Host an Exchange Student for the Coming Year

ASSE, International Student Exchange Programs (ASSE) would like to introduce you to some very special people.

Exceptional high school students from Scandinavia, France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Poland, Mexico, Japan, and many other countries, are looking forward to spending the upcoming academic year in Canada as exchange students. Local families are needed to host students.

Families are encouraged to have open-minds, and have an interest in people, and culture.

The students are between 15 and 18 years old, are fluent in English, fully insured and have their own spending money. They expect to share household responsibilities and be included in family activities.

TO: All Full-time Students
FROM: Jon Gonder, Dean, Faculty of Humanities
Reid Keays, Dean, Faculty of Science and Engineering
Pierre Roberge, Dean, Faculty of Professional Schools
Geoff Tesson, Dean, Faculty of Social Sciences

The purpose of this letter is two-fold.

The first is to let you know, well in advance, that all full-time students who intend to return to Laurentian next September will be required to Advance Register during the period mid-July to mid-August.

Secondly, in order to ensure that your Advance Registration goes as smoothly as possible, we have designated the period March 23 to April 2 for Advance Registration Counselling.

You should make an appointment now to meet with your Academic Advisor during the counselling period. Your Advisor will assist you in selecting courses for next year, resolving problems you might have in meeting degree requirements, and suggesting options which are open to you.

This is not a formal commitment to register for next year, but a counselling session. It is in your best interests to take advantage of this opportunity -- don't miss it!

Good luck with your studies.

Lam Dam Defence

The SGA President and other political hopefuls may accuse me for undermining the credibility of the SGA. But they in fact have already missed the point. The point is that only 3 out of 10 students voted; suggesting that the SGA is not taken seriously on campus and that we don't have any credibility to lose.

This stems from this years executive, who have been less than stimulating, thus maintaining the boring status quo. The system needs to be shaken up, dramatic change and leadership are needed for once and for all, because student involvement in SGA politics is at an all time low.

Via the blatant breach of Robert's Rule of Order and the SGA Bylaws and Constitution, Ted and Mark (CRO) have created an even greater injustice beyond reasonable retribution. This personal vendetta is being used for the advancement of their own political agenda. I am nothing more than a mere scape goat that applauds the board in their efforts to view the situation rationally.

As your President-elect I have an opportunity to rectify this situation with numerous electoral reforms and well thought out guidelines since I am experiencing these implications first hand.

My role in the SGA was to work hard for the students. It's unfortunate that many are too concerned with political games rather than servicing the student populous. It is also very frightful that many may become real politicians explaining why our Federal and Provincial governments are a joke. These governments have already forgotten how to help people. With this in mind it is truly you students who will suffer as a result.

Contrary to Mr. Clark and Mr. Green (CRO), The Municipal Elections Act states that "a person is no longer a candidate once a position is filled." This can be verified by Ellen Kerr the City Clerk. Therefore, having been given official notice that I was acclaimed and advertising such information publicly at the poll booths I filled the position and therefore, am no longer a candidate at the time of voting.

This debate carried on for some 5 hours and I credit the board for seeing through the smoke and magical phrases of the "Witch Hunters". I must admit it is often difficult to discern hear-say from reality. And the reality is that I am your President-elect, and being unjustly treated with slander and false rumours of my sexuality. The credibility and accountability must be given back to the students, if it means closer scrutiny next year's elections would it a bad thing? I say not! In, fact next years council will have a greater input into the quality of life here at Laurentian. And I will lead the way through an even more productive year.

As a last ditch effort to remove me from office. Several breaches of our constitution and Bylaws had to be done (7 to be exact). At this instant I can agree with Ted in saying the board was "irresponsible" by allowing such breaches to occur. I can argue all the technical and legal infractions that Ted and Mark allowed to occur using their so called "Responsible Ideals" but there is not enough space to do so. Yet, examples such as going outside our constitution to extract only that information which would strengthen their cause is a great example especially when it states in our Constitution that the only external source for guidance is Robert's Rules not the Canadian Election Act.

1) If we wished to follow the Canadian Election Act then the election should have been run as such with designated polls and poll clerks with out conflict of interest. For example the average salary was $76.78 yet Marks' girlfriend received $134.94. In addition 14 out of 19 poll clerks were from UC at this point the election was invalid.

2) My first ballot was cast on Wednesday without ID presentation, according to the Canadian Elections Act it should have been spoiled because I wrote "Mark Green is a big weenie!" and "Where's Bill the Cat's name?" on the ballot. On Thursday I was allowed to cast a second ballot unchecked, proving the election was riddled with flaws, as did the several other double voters.

3) The list of improprieties performed by Mark Green the CRO is very extensive and blame is left to me regarding Bylaw amendments. Well Piotr, I worked very hard with the constitution and policy committee and only to have our Bylaw amendments approved omnibus at Ted's discretion during two Board meetings prior to the election. In addition our old Bylaws of 90-91 stated that STUDENT CARDS were necessary for balloting. Why did Mark during his term as VP drop such a critical requirement.

To get back on track, the referendum question put forth is unconstitutional and non-binding. The ruling is redundant since my disqualification was not successful. In essence this is a last ditch attempt to have me resign from a position that I will not officially hold until May 1st.

The list of discrepancies continues beyond this article, and it is such instances which I intend to change and prevent next year. This year we only had 2 contested positions in the Election out of 17 possible races. Is this not a sad situation? Did we have any credibility to lose?

In closing, I sincerely apologize for the resultant crisis and am willing to discuss this situation anytime.

Thanking you for your support in advance.

Official-Languages Monitor* Program

Under a program funded by the Department of the Secretary of State of Canada, the Ministry of Education and Training in conjunction with the Council of Ministers of Education, Canada, invites students to apply for the position of second-language monitors (French or English) for the academic year 1993-94.

Monitors (part-time)

Official-languages monitors must be full-time postsecondary students usually studying in a province other than their own. They will work between six and eight hours per week under the supervision of a second-language teacher. Some francophone monitors will be assigned to French schools outside Quebec. For eight months participation in the program, they will receive at least $3,500 and one return trip between their home and the host province.

To be eligible for part-time monitor duties, students must have completed at least one year of postsecondary studies or will have completed such studies by the end of the 1992-93 academic year.

Monitors (Full-time)

Full-time monitors must have completed at least one year of postsecondary studies. Duties consist of assisting second-language teachers (French or English) in rural or semi-urban areas usually in a province other than their own for 25 hours per week. Some francophone monitors will be assigned to French schools outside Quebec. Monitors will receive up to $11,400 for 10 months of participation. They will also receive two return trips per year between their home province and the host province. They may also receive a settling-in allowance of a minimum of $300 and a maximum of $1,110 for commuting expenses within the host province.

Application forms and program brochures may be obtained from placement offices in postsecondary institutions, or from the address below:

You have all seen this man at one point in your Laurentian University careers. Some of you may know him by name, some may take his class, others may actually be afraid of him and his not-so-ordinary appearance, some don't care and still more will wonder who the hell is this guy. Well, I'm here to tell you.

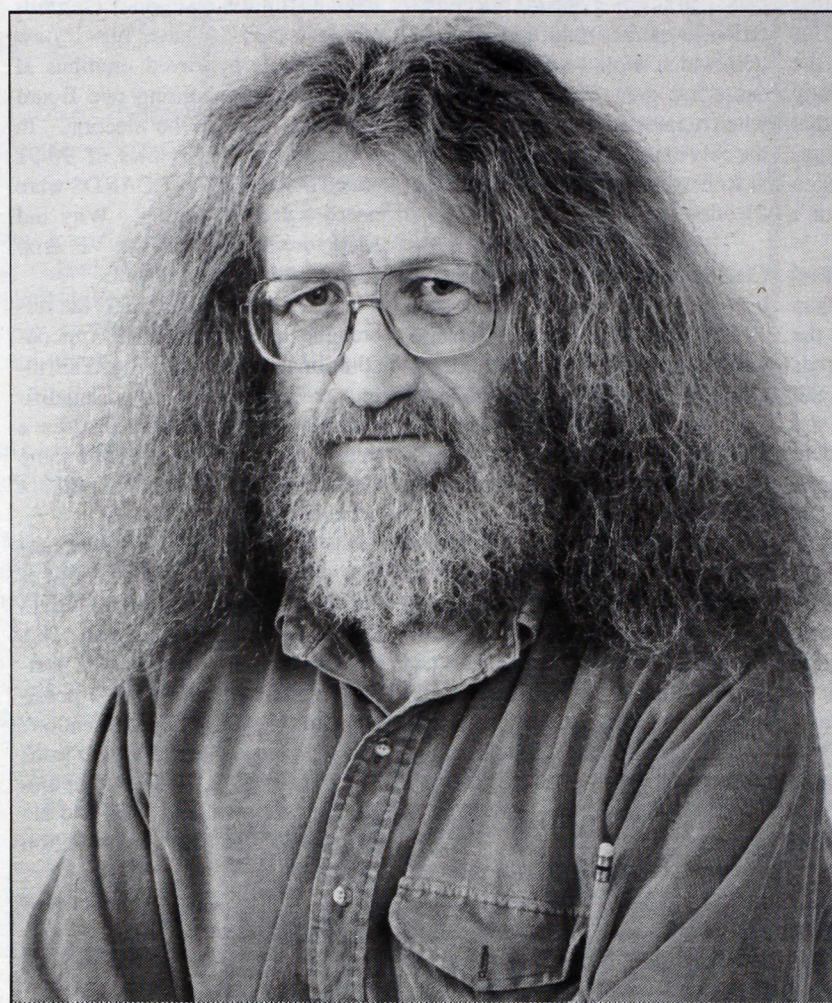

This is Dr. (Dr.) William Taylor "Tay" Wilson. He has been an associate professor in the Psychology Department, here at Laurentian University, for the past 3 years and has just completed his second Ph.D., this time in philosophy. Tay is broad in depth with his studies, considering his B.Sc. degree was in mathematics and physics 20 years ago, and his M.A. was earned in Psychology three years later. In 1969, he earned his first Ph.D. (in Psychology) and he has been a registered Psychologist for the past 20 years.

In part, because of his background he has spent a considerable part of his professional career in multi-discipline work with engineers and physical scientists. His local accomplishments as an applied psychologist working with engineers include participation in development and assessment of the STOL air service for Northern Ontario, the Sudbury Worker Bus Service and the North Bay Highway 11 by-pass. In addition, he co-founded with an engineer the first Provincial Social Factors in Transportation and Communication

Unit in Canada, set up the Applied Psychology Unit in the graduate technical university at Cranfield, England.

Dr. (Dr.) Wilson spent nine years of his career in Britain split between the Applied Psychology Unit in Cambridge and Cranfield Institute of Technology, a university offering only the M.Sc. and Ph.D. degrees, where he was head of the Applied Psychology Department. He has further spent considerable time in the government sector where he carried out a considerable amount of applied work. His last position being Director of Social Policy of Communications, Canada, Ottawa. His assessment of the $250 million TELIDON program was highlighted in a recent Stephen Strauss column on Mind and Matter in the Globe and Mail.

On top of all these achievements, he has also written 26 refereed publications, three books, 36 governments reports, and 25 private sector and institute reports. He has had some non-written contributions to the federal, provincial, societal and municipal governing bodies, including: consulting for UK federal and Bedfordshire county government, designer of Canada-wide program for the development of local problem oriented applied R&D centers across Canada, co-development of an on-the-road driving skill test for drunk drivers which increased by a factor of ten the fraction of stopped drivers who would be legally impaired with a corresponding drop in the number of sober drivers who would be stopped for a breathalyzer test, founder of the university extension in Moosonee and the list goes on.

When asked where and when he had the time to do his six hundred page thesis paper for his second Ph.D., he said "A page a day for the past three years."

Tay has two major beliefs concerning learning which are sensible concepts to learn if you are to make it in the world. One is that you must study a very specific field or topic, general knowledge is less useless. The second is that you must have in-depth knowledge of other subjects as well to both keep you from being isolated and to help you in your major concentration by overlapping the knowledge and enable you to co-operate with others in other fields. This philosophy of learning gives us students a great deal of opportunity for future career plans as well because we would be limited to our field. And how 'bout that hair? Being a child of the 60's had its bonuses, and this was one. It's not that long hair is better, but that everyone should have a choice in how they wear it. The 60's were based on individualism, where what you wear, what you do and how you live is not to be designated by the masses but by the individual and Tay believes this and doesn't think it is necessary to change.

"He is who he is, and that's all that he is."

Science and Engineering Students Need Not Fear

Reid R. Keays
Dean, Faculty of Science & Engineering

Students in Geology and Earth Science programs need not fear the loss of the courses they need to graduate, despite the difficult financial circumstances described by your reporter last week.

I understand and appreciate the concern shown by students taking courses in the Geology Department. They have been attracted to Laurentian by the quality of our programs and everything will be done to make sure that they are as pleased with their experience as twenty five years of their predecessors have been. At the same time, it would be dishonest to pretend that universities are immune to the financial pressures being felt by other bodies from corporations to School Boards.

I can speak only for the Faculty of Science and Engineering and can agree that ways of doing things will have to adapt to the pressure of the situation. Science and Engineering programs, which depend on such things as supplies of chemicals and properly maintained laboratory and computer equipment, are often more vulnerable to cuts in day to day operating budgets than programs which do not have such needs. Nevertheless, the burden of budget cuts will be felt by all parts of the University.

As your reporter and others have correctly noted, there are special opportunities for earth science programs at Laurentian because of the presence of the Ontario Geological Survey on campus. Those benefits are currently the focus of my attention and they spread well beyond the Geology Department and even the Faculty of Science and Engineering. I foresee biologists, engineers, geographers and economists benefiting from our new campus colleagues. Vision, planning and careful management will be needed to develop those opportunities as well as to overcome our present difficulties. If I doubted Laurentian had those attributes, then I would not have made the personal decision to come here from Australia last summer. I believe our students, for whom the University exists, can have similar confidence.

Rape Rumours Resolved?

Rape: the crime of having sexual intercourse with a woman or girl forcibly or without her consent. - Webster's.

Sexual assault: an unwanted act of sexual nature. - Siobhan Kari, External Affairs Minister - SGA.

An open seminar was held at the Great Hall Thursday March 11th to examine facts and statistics concerning campus rape and to dispel rumours arising from the lack of information about a recent rape which occurred near the Laurentian University campus.

Alex McCauley, inspector with the Criminal Investigations Division for Sudbury Regional Police stressed that "sexual assault is a priority and we've come along way, yet we still have a long way to go in the prevention of sexual assault." He reported that since 1990 there have been 584 cases of these assaults in the Sudbury region, 8 of which have occurred on or near the Laurentian University campus. Two of those cases would be considered rape by definition.

McCauley then apologized for failing to release information regarding the recent rape incidents that occurred on or near the campus. He explained that "[the investigators] do not have a problem in releasing information...as long as it is not detrimental to the victim...or the investigation." The Inspector expressed his regret for the limited disclosure and said that, with hindsight, he realizes it was by Chantal Beaulne and Dan Scott an oversight on the part of the police force.

Norma McCrae-Ward, Harassment Officer for Laurentian University, disclosed that LU has received two grants from the Ministry of Education. The first, in the amount of $17,600, is earmarked to address women's safety initiatives. This would include a replacement unit for one of the emergency phones, an expanded walk-home service, and education on the subject of sexual assault.

One example of such education is the play "Single and Sexy", written at the University of Waterloo and customized for Laurentian. It examines sexual attitudes and the role that alcohol and drugs can play in sexual assault or date and acquaintance rapes.

The second grant, for $4,440, is a fund for the implementation of a government initiative to combat date and acquaintance rapes. As Kari reminded the audience:

"68.5 - 83% of sexual assaults were committed by men known to the victim."

The funds have been allocated towards the introduction of educational materials made available by Richard Allen's special project team, in the form of leaflets, brochures, and videos.

The lighting on the University campus to be major concern for students, staff and panel members. In particular, the lack of lighting on the path from Huntington to the Teacher's College raised concerns. Kari provided an explanation for the University's reluctance to light this path. Apparently, University officials do not regard it as an "official pathway", allowing them to deny all responsibility for any act or crime committed on the path.

Despite the attempt to Norma McCrae-Ward and Siobhan Kari to draw attention to the far more frequent phenomenon of date and acquaintance rape, the focus remained on the fear of the "stranger in the bush", particularly with regards to the concerns of students, Ed Leclerc, Director of Physical Plant, and Inspector McCauley. However, the seminar provided valuable insight into the reality behind the rumours, the reason for the withholding of information, and an important opportunity for a discussion of campus security concerns.

THE SGA BOARD RECLAIMS ITS SANITY

staff writers

March 16th's SGA/AGE meeting began with the announcement by SGA Board Chairman, Mike Mayo, that his decision to allow a clause of the report by Mark Green, CRO for SGA elections, to be removed by a motion of the Board was outside of his jurisdiction as Speaker

He stated that after consideration of the events that took place at the meeting and the action taken by the Board he decided to consult outside sources as to the procedure that should have been followed. He stated during the Board meeting that based upon his research, he took the wrong approach at the last Board meeting by letting Board members violate the Constitution by passing a motion that was directly opposed to a section of the Constitution. Section 7.03 of the SGA Constitution states that the CRO of SGA elections may take disciplinary action he deems appropriate against a member of the SGA with regard to election activities. Mayo went on to state to the Board that. "No Chairperson or Board should have the power to overturn its own by-laws."

When the Board went to a vote on whether the original report of the CRO should be accepted. The vote went 16 in favour of the original report and 13 opposed to adopting the original report. The original CRO Report stated that Simon Chapelle would be barred from taking the position of President next year. After the vote Mike

Mayo declared that the, "Presidential position has been declared vacant."

The still delayed V.P. Finances elections were to follow. Unfortunately, the meeting was then dominated by the questions for the two remaining candidates. The questions quickly deteriorated into the a slanderous match. Terry had no bones about the situation. "I'm getting a little sick of that bullshit". He went on to say that some of his supporters were being harassed by the supporters of Grant Goss, the other candidate.

At that point, the meeting went into camera and spared the public all the rumors. When it became public again, the alleged accusations of racism at the SGA trip to Daytona were addressed. More on that in the next edition!

Due to the disqualification of Simon Chapelle, the referendum question will NOT appear on the ballot to be cast on March 24th and 25th, 1993.

"Shall Simon Chapelle take the office of president for the SGA Board 1993-1994?"

RECIPE #9

Broiled Fish in Barbecue Sauce

Here's an easy to perk up bland frozen fish. This recipe can even be used on a barbecue, since the principle of broiling is the same on the grill as in the oven.

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Cooking time: 16 minutes
Serves three or four

Preheat broiler.

Melt in frying pan over medium heat:
2 tbsp. (30 mL) butter or margarine

Combine in a small bowl:
melted butter or margarine
1 tbsp. (15 mL) lemon juice
2 tbsp. (30 mL) ketchup
1/4 tsp. (2 mL) Worcestershire sauce
1/4 tsp. (2 mL) salt
1/4 tsp. (1 mL) dried mustard

Place on cookie sheet lined with aluminum foil:
1 pkg. 1 lb. (454 g) fish fillets, thawed
Pour sauce over fish.

Place fish under broiler for eight minutes.

Baste fish with sauce.

Turn fish, cook another eight minutes.

Fish is ready when it flakes easily with a fork.

Don't Start Without:
small bowl
frying pan
large spoon
measuring spoons cookie sheet
spatula
aluminum foil

Helpful Hints:
• Fish should be quite close to the element when broiling. Be careful when using this setting.
• If fish is thick, it may take longer than eight minutes per side to cook. You can tell it's ready to turn when the sauce begins to turn dark around the edges. Cut the fish into pieces if it's very thick so it will cook faster.

• You can make extra sauce and keep it on hand for future fish dinners. Store in a glass jar in the fridge.

Serving Ideas:

• French Fries OK
• Spanish Rice go well with fish. To use up left-over potatoes, slice them and place on cookie sheet next to fish for final eight minutes of cooking time. Dot with butter or margarine and, if desired, sprinkle with 1 tsp. (5 mL) grated Parmesan cheese. Serve when golden brown.

Amos & Andrew

Starring: Samuel L. Jackson, Nicolas Cage

by Theo Rallis
staff writer

This movie is about an author, scholar celebrity and Pulitzer Prize recipient Andrew Sterling (Samuel L. Jackson) who purchases a summer home on a beautiful island, occupied by society's elite and most upstanding. The humour starts when police mistake him for being a burglar and attempt to apprehend him. Once realizing the error of their ways, they try to amend the situation by sending a scuz-ball crook, Amos (Nicolas Cage) into the home and take Andrew Sterling hostage then release him to police and give himself up. The police would then seem like heroes when in reality they were the bumbling idiots that caused the entire situation. From here things get worse by circumstances too torturous to explain.

As the average Joe and not a movie reviewer I would have to say that this movie had its funny whimsical moments along with its deep underlying message of race relations. If I were in a mood for comedy, I would go see this movie, but only on a Tuesday. Overall the film was cute.

But unfortunately I do review movies and I'm not your average Joe. So for my critical critique I would have to say that this movie is an imbecile mistaken-identity farce - witless to the point of desperation, mired in the very stereotypes its debunking. Samuel L. Jackson had given a mesmerizing performance in Spike Lee's "Jungle Fever." I have no idea how he could humiliate himself this way - granted, some people would do anything for money, but come on, there are limits. And as for Nicolas Cage showing up on the set unshaven or with his hair unkempt, he certainly was in character playing a mindless moron thief. Because after watching this movie I certainly felt robbed.

Blade Runner

starring: Harrison Ford, Rutger Hauer, Sean Young, Edward James Olmos

by Theo Rallis
staff writer

This movie is a high Action, Sci-fi roller coaster ride you won't forget. This movie takes place in the early 21st Century, and the Tyrell corporation advanced robot evolution into the Nexus phase- a being virtually identical to a human-known as a replicant.

The Nexus6 Replicants were superior in strength and agility, and at least equal in intelligence, to the genetic engineers who created them.

Replicants were used- off world as slave labour, in hazardous exploration and colonization of other planets.

After a bloody mutiny by a Nexus 6 combat team in an off-world colony, Replicants were declared illegal on earth-under penalty of death.

Special police squads- Blade Runner Units- had orders of shoot to kill, upon detection, any trespassing replicant.

Ridley Scott (director of Alien, Black Rain, Thelma & Louise) does an outstanding job of confusing us now and again, so we question which character's are human which Nexus, and by questioning the characters we question ourselves. There are so many underlying meanings, in this movie that its impossible to list them all but the most evident, is the one's where do we come from? Where are we going? And how long do we have?

A powerful, moving film that makes you question everything. there are great special effects and even better acting. Make sure to run not walk to your video store to see this film if you already haven't.

BLADE RUNNER

Not Another Royal Bashing...Please!

You want to talk stereotypes?...Not colonial day, but the very facade of a government which you obviously pay homage to.

All hail our gracious P.M. Canadians raise your middle finger and flail it wildly!

You say the British Empire is pompous, and pretentious? Perhaps you should look a little closer to home. Why is the pomp and circumstance necessary? It is for the same reason that we allow multi-million dollar expenditures to our own dignitaries to travel, refurbish their estates, etc.

Face it, the royals are a form of Global entertainment. Why, a trip to the grocery store would be incomplete if it were without the juicy tabloids spewing hot gossip about our blue-bloods. Big deal! So Fergie and Di like their fun (and their men), and so what if the Queen Mum likes her booze. And is it really a matter of concern that Chuck likes old women with saggy breasts and that he enjoys phone sex? If only our own officials could be this alluring and entertaining. If it were, I assume that everyone would be a staunch conservative.

You are right that there is a certain pride and sense of origin associated with the royals, and perhaps you are also correct in saying that there should be more pride for Canada. But until Mulroney has a homosexual affair with Joe Clarke, or Mila becomes a drunk with a raging social disease, I shall continue to observe March 9 as a day of monarchical pride.

So yes, let's all join together and celebrate our colonialism.

Long live the Queen...Long live the Empire, and yes, long live Canada, after all we are all entitled to our ridiculous opinions. (No apologies necessary Mark)!

Lenny Kravitz

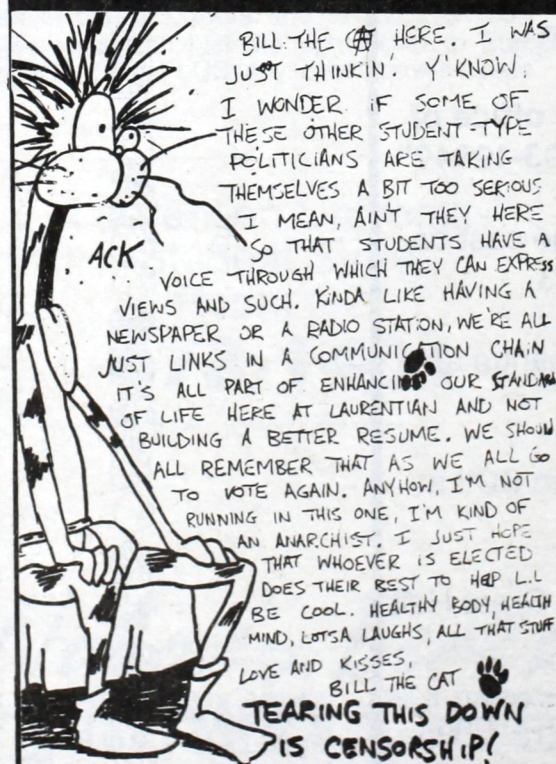

Are You Gonna Go My Way

by Theo Rallis
Staff writer

There's not much that can be said about this album, other than phenomenal, Kravitz' best yet. A powerfully moving Album that contains elements of gospel, jazz, blues, R & B, classical and hard riff cording rock. This album[s] a generous feast of fuzzed-out guitar, butter-milk bass, and more of Lenny Kravitz' metaphysical lyrics. Quite enjoyable were Craig Ross' explosive, deep rooted, soul feeling, gut-wrenching guitar solo's. Jimi was the first to make a guitar cry, but it's nice to see that someone hasn't forgotten how to do it.

Some people might see this album as a pastiche of the past: Stax guitar, Abbey Road harmonies, woodstock drums. they would have a point for its easy to find faint reminiscent traces of Hendrix, Zeppelin, Beatles and The Stones, but make no mistake about it, this album is all Kravitz. With North American Music that has fragmented into analogonistic camps of techno advocates, New Jack Swing champions and Michael Bolton Bores, this album was long overdue.

If your caught up in a constant battle to conform with society and your peers, don't buy this album, because you won't be able to appreciate the pure genius virtue that Kravitz is. On the other hand, if your tired of Societies, socialist opresitic, dehumanization of every day of life, and think bell bottoms are cool,... Enjoy.

DIRTYLOUDNOISE AT THE TOWNE HOUSE

by Diane Sidik
staff writer

Screaming metal/rock funk that pumps you into a frenzy, Vancouver's own Spice of Life packed a high-energy performance that left the crowd blitzed.

Originally from Montreal, this thrashin' band are currently on their dirtyloudnoise tour to support their album Next Left Albuquerque. Their cross-country tour will eventually take them to Vancouver and they have been on the road now for almost two weeks. This was their second time in Sudbury.

Compared to groups such as The Red Hot Chili Peppers and Living Colour, Jean-Marc Blanchard a.k.a. Caged Animal (vocals) describes their music as "intense, aggressive, and alternative."

Gutsy lyrics coupled with Dave Lampron's a.k.a. Hubba Bubba smashing guitar riffs, Andy Simpson's power drumming, and Greg Eldridge's a.k.a. Smegma innovative bass rhythms create the ultimate package of hard-driving sound. Heavy influences from Black Sabbath and KISS are discernable in their style as well.

Why the big move to Vancouver?

Says Jean-Marc, "Ten months ago we reached a certain plateau of success, however the industry (for our kind of music) was very poor in Montreal so we decided to move to Vancouver."

"So we could concentrate on our music and nothing else," adds Smegma.

C o m m e n t s
Donny Farion (road manager) on the success rate of their tour thus far, "All the shows have gone well."

Next Left
Albuquerque is their debut full-length album after having done two previous demos, Coming of Age, and What is Purple being their first.

Catch their premier video for "Now" produced by Weiner Boy on Muchmusic (band's fave song-track 2 of side B on NLA), and you'll be introduced to one of the most exciting, visual bands to date. See them live and you'll be knee-jumping with the rest of them.

Oh and yes folks, Jean-Marc was born in Sudbury. Hurrah for local talent!

SPICE ADVICE: "Never go to bed with an itchy bumhole, 'cause you'll wake up with a smelly finger."

A Little Bit Of Soul Still A Handful Have It!

by Stacey Santi
staff writer

"The music is your special friend Dance on fire as it intends" least you can plead temporary insanity or that you temporarily lost ground. When you lose your soul though, you can't just get it back together and ain't that the truth.
-JDM

Early rock'n'roll used to be soulful, not the type of music but the inspiration and power it exuded. Even if you glimpse vintage clips today musicians don't just play the music and give the message, they feel it and believe it. To those musicians it was about love, the truth and soul. Today, there's...something missing and it's taken awhile to pinpoint it. But it all boils down to soul—who has it and who has lost it. We could make a list similar to What's in and What's out, but why bother? One list will be extensively longer.

However, this doesn't mean that all musicians have lost their soul. There is still a handful that have it. But, there is a great majority who (well, never had it) and a majority who may have been forced to lose it through the industry. Coercive? Maybe.

It seems that personal conviction and integrity can be measured into dollars and cents. It's a shame really, for people who have become famous for their ability to say "shove it" and shaft society. Now it seems that for a certain price the attitude is "I'll be anything you want me to be...just close your eyes."

I think the ultimate irony though, is today's powerful were yesterday's rebels. Talk about being undermined. For example, back in the 60s and 70s bands didn't care about things like corporate sponsorship and their video being this week's pick hit. It was about doing their own thing. It was about soul. I mean, look at the Doors, Janis Joplin, even early Stones. They all had soul and still do. I think that Keith Richards still epitomizes the feeling that is lacking, the one that used to fuel rock....ATTITUDE! Way back, rock'n'roll was all attitude. The Sex Pistols will vouch for this (though I'm glad talent plays a greater role today). Now it seems that what was once the most important unintentional factor has shifted emphasis. It's this reason that makes artists like Bob Dylan stand out even more. You'll probably never see Bob singing on a Pepsi commercial. It just wouldn't be...soul.

Soul...it's for this reason that bands have staying power, integrity and above all magic. Just look at those musicians who have stood tall in the line of fire. They didn't just stand in the flames, they danced with them, all for a little bit of soul.

The Waltons: Lik My Trakter

WEA: 1992
by Stacey Santi
staff writer

I always say a good song is one which beckons you on the first beat, makes you follow on the second, and then makes you beg for more after the third.. Many songs do this, but many albums miss the mark. However, this is not the case with the Waltons' impressive Lik My Trakter, which captured me from the first song until the last.

This tight trio from Canada consisting of Jason "Walton" Plumb, Keith Nakonechny, and Dave Cooney excel in catchy melodies and hook lines in both their verses and choruses. This is especially evident during The Living Room, Colder Than You, and Sunshine.

In addition to their catchy melodies, the Waltons have (dare I say it) the "I" word. Yes, yes, yes—integrity. Their lyrics are honest, and down-to earth with no sense of pretense and this fact alone makes it an endearing album.

I'd hate to compare them to other artists, but I'm going to. If you love Hunters & Collectors or Crowded House (before Klingons coerced them into letting Tim Finn join), you will definitely love this album. One thing that stands out about both Crowded House and Hunters and Collectors are their strong songs—they may be simple but they are poignant and the Waltons have succeeded in getting this point across.

Despite this, some critics may propose that their songs aren't diverse—in other words, they all sound the same. But I didn't find that this was the case at all. Each song was different and complete with resplendent harmonies and good musical arrangements. Some songs have a folk feel some a "pop" feel, and there's even a bit of reggae. They seem to have touched on the fact that strong song writing is more important than anything else.

The gems that shine on this melancholy display are: The Living Room, Colder Than You, Waterfall and The Farmers Hand and The Naked Rain, though the whole album possessed the very important characteristics of continuity and flow. Not only will Lik My Trakter beckon you, but it will bait and hook you, and like I always say, if a formula works stick with it.

Screaming Trees: Anthology

SST Records: 1991
by Stacey Santi
staff writer

Many bands spend their entire careers searching for their own distinct sound, and ultimately only end up sounding like their influences. This is not the case with the Screaming Trees who have not only found their own sound, but are also not afraid to extend their sound and feel their limitations.

Anthology is a compilation of the band's best from 1987-1989 and it reveals a number of good things through this process.

Firstly, the band has grown. This may be obvious, but their songs have really matured. For example, The Turning has a mean organ solo on it, which is something I would have expected to hear on a Trees album.

In the later years, obtaining an edge didn't seem to be a prominent goal. Once they didn't try too hard to be a "driving" band they succeeded in letting some really good song arrangements shine.

This is definitely a driving album, characterized by a sound that only the Trees could master. I think the listener could safely cite the Ramones as an influence especially on Other Worlds, while you could also hear a Jimi Hendrix feel during the psychedelic "Cold Rain".

Other highlights include "Walk Through To The Other Side", which reminded me of Love & Rockets and Flower Web which sounds influenced by Iggy Pop.

"99¢ A Shooter, What A Bargain!!" What a title. Yes, "Concerned Friend", 99¢ a shooter is a bargain. And I do agree that it was lucky that your friend has friends like you to help her out after an irresponsible pub night. Your final message of "be a responsible drinker and a responsible server" should be well taken.

In your letter, you seem a little bitter towards the pub staff. I don't think should be; I was at the pub the night in question and there were not 30 people in the pub, 150 people is a better estimate (that's dividing the 300 I thought by 2 to compensate for my double vision).

On behalf of the pub

staff, I think they will notice someone who had 20 to 30 shots and have said something. I've been cut off at the pub before, even a few times when I haven't been all that intoxicated. But they do do a good job; if your friend however weighs about 140 lbs and thinks her body can absorb 20 to 30 ounces of alcohol in 2 hours without adverse effects, then she is not only irresponsible but stupid. And this also goes for her companions that night. If they cannot look after each other, do not expect the Pub or any other drinking establishment for that matter to "baby-sit" them. Maybe your friend and everybody else out there must realize that if you go out for a night on the town with a pocketful of money, you don't have to spend it all on booze. You can get something to eat, non-alcoholic beverages, etc.

In The Dark..

On the 99¢ Shooter Thing.

Did the 99¢ shooter thing have something to do with the amount she drank, maybe, she probably would have used the $20 to $30 she came with in on booze also and only get semi-drunk. But suppose it was all you could drink for a dollar, I think she would have ordered $30 worth.

While I'm on the topic of drinking, let's talk about driving. Yes, commercials and other forms of mass media tell us that they don't mix. But, we are too stupid to realize this and keep on doing it. Proof of this, over the break, there was an accident on Ramsey Lake Rd., where a Laurentian student died. I'm thinking that Canadians should adopt a tradition from South America. In South America, whenever there is a traffic fatality along a road, a shrine or cross is erected at that spot. This could be a sobering thought to drivers going out for the night. Can you imagine what Hwy. 69 would look like, we would not need guard rails. There is easily a fatality per kilometer of that highway.

So, in the words of a concerned friend, watch out for yourself, your friends and even people who are not your friends.

RUSSIAN PRINCE VODKA

PRESENTS

New Stuff

Russian Prince Vodka wants you to listen to and read about the hottest new music available today. Just $29.50 gets you six different "New Stuff" CD's featuring a minimum of 16 brand new tracks each, and twelve issues of SoundCan magazine, the new pulse of Canadian music. Here's just a few of the bands featured on the current "New Stuff" CD presented by Russian Prince Vodka.

Dig Circus

From the garage to the open stage to Toronto's finer clubs, Dig Circus has built a substantial grassroots following with their mixture of folk, rock and funk. The six-piece band released their debut EP, Shekkie, last year to great reviews and radio play. This year, besides touring plans, the band stars in its own comic book and is getting together a full-length CD.

Daisy DeBolt

Some have called her music 'ethno-fusion,' others have dubbed it 'Alpine-polka-reggae,' but that's merely scratching the surface of this talented artist's diverse range of sounds. Manitoba-born and formerly one-half of acclaimed duo Fraser and DeBolt, Daisy has been raising eyebrows with her dynamic and eclectic solo CD release, Souls Talking.

Pressure Drop

An unusual sound is echoing from the rocky shores of Newfoundland, a sound that makes you think of islands in the Caribbean sun, swinging hips and hot sand. It's the reggae moves of St. John's quintet Pressure Drop, who made a big splash opening the Great Canadian Party last summer in their hometown. Their self-titled debut CD has generated positive vibrations across the country, particularly through the first single, Freedom.

As an added bonus, if you subscribe now through this special campus offer you will be eligible to win:

- One of three Hitachi CX-W300 personal stereos featuring CD player and double cassette deck for high speed dubbing.
- One of fifty 5 CD "Hot Packs" featuring new albums by artists featured on the "New Stuff" CD presented by Russian Prince Vodka.

Complete information and mail to: Campus Subscription Offer, 219 Dufferin Street, Suite 100, Toronto, Ontario M6K 3J1

- ☐ Yes, I would like to receive 6 CD's and 12 issues of SoundCan magazine for $29.50 (including GST), and please enter my name into the contest.

Today it suddenly crystalized,
When I watched them bobble side to side,
That truly regal things are they,
Those perfect orbs of feminine clay.

And although it's wrong to stare and gape
One has to marvel at their shape,
Two gentle slopes in a meadow fine,
A pair of peaks that few will climb.

A sweater made of virgin wool.
Seems to know just how to pull,
Around those works of human art,
To make men stammer, stutter and start.

My conscience now has been expressed,
In high regard I hold the breast,
And I hope the images I've conveyed,
Interpret the beauty that they display.

Or was it fate
That took you,

And back again
And often death
Will make it show.

Ms. Manners

by Judith Fartin

Ms. Manners generally prefers to follow the old rule that it is best not to concern oneself with what other people think, but she feels it at times necessary to point out that one might want to pay attention if someone thinks you are a royal hole-in-the-posterior region.

Let her give you an example. A certain arts student decided that exercise might be a good way to reduce year-end stress. After a few inquiries as to times and activities, she decided that swimming was perfect for her. She hurried down to the pool one day after class, changed and showered, and ignoring her feelings of bathing costume paranoia, walked into the pool area. She was relieved to find the pool empty, and tried to ignore the stares of a little man standing in front of a small group off to the side of the pool. Unfortunately, the man began to shout at her when she sat down at the water's edge. She resisted the urge to look down to see if she was naked. Because of the pool's acoustic properties, she could not hear the man's words, only see his lips flapping angrily on his scarlett face. He continued shouting until the words "pool is closed" reached her ears.

Well, was that poor student ever confused. She had been told that the pool was open for another half hour. She politely questioned this policy, knowing too well how sometimes people in "power positions" like to push students around.

The little man then made a grave etiquette error. He adopted a condescending tone of voice. (Gentle Readers, never use a condescending tone of voice unless you really want to piss someone off). The man began to explain in his arrogant way that he had worked at the pool for a long time and felt he knew the hours too well to be questioned. The swimmer turned to go, and in a calm voice mentioned that he needn't have been so rude. He screamed at her retreating back, "You don't be rude!" (in the way of great comebacks...) "Now get the hell out of my pool!"

This left the poor swimmer even more confused as she had thought that the pool belonged to students and faculty alike, and that surely a sixth person in an Olympic-sized pool would not have resulted in overcrowding. She also thought that encouraging, rather than destructive and elitist behaviour would go much further in promoting physical fitness.

Ms. Manners once had the opportunity to work in a retail store, and she knows that if she had ever spoken to a customer the way the man spoke to the student, she would have been fired. Yes, that's correct, fired. Gentle Readers, in this world it is much better to always treat people like people, regardless of their age and how many pieces of paper they have collected. If you follow this rule, you can always hold your head high and hope that someday, everyone truly does get what they deserve.

Attitude, Infinity and The Reliable One.

by Prisoner of Reality

Sorry I missed last week but you know how it is, assignments, essays tests all on the same day. But I'm back with a whole slew of new stuff.

Hardware, one of DC's newest titles just hit the stands this week-end. It has an interesting premise: a young genius is taken care of by an older wiser inventor and given a chance at a better life. Curtis Metcalf, the smart guy in question, works for the inventor for a few years and then starts rocking the boat by asking for a share of the royalties his inventions have brought in. Turned down, he develops a huge attitude problem and decides to do two things: become a super-enhanced human and destroy his mentor. Kudos to DC for featuring a black man as the lone hero of a book. Does this mean racial barriers are falling down in the comic world?

Remember The Infinity Gauntlet and The Infinity War? Remember the shitload of crossovers that went with it? Well, it seems that Marvel is going on with a new Infinity series: The Infinity Crusade. Everything starts happening when the Goddess, who represents Warlock's good side, decides to ride the planet of all evil. Great, fabulous idea, but things will go awry, of course. The heroes chosen for this mission are a little overzealous in their clean-up and stop differentiating between good and evil. It's all the same to them and it comes down to the ends justifying the means.

WetWorks is a comics series developed and slated for last October release. The anticipated demand for this book was so high that it was listed in the majority of price guides as the hottest selling comic available. Unfortunately, it's March and the damn book hasn't come out yet. Now, we have good news and bad news. We do have a tentative release date. That's the good news. The release date is in September. That's the bad news. With all the em-ming and ha-ing on the part of the creator, Whilce Portacio, the interest of the fans will wane. Image will have to pull out the big promo-guns to ensure big sales for this series. I, personally, just don't care anymore.

Anyone out there collecting/reading Image comics? Are you just as frustrated as I am with the irregular appearance of titles on the shelves? I suppose we could write it off to a new company forming but I'm getting a little miffed with waiting two months for a new comics to come out. And, when these comics finally make it out, you have to pull out the past issues to go over what has happened. Maybe the other artists involved with Image (Liefeld, McKeown, Portacio, Silvestri, Larsen, et al) should take a cue from McFarlane and Spawn. McFarlane has devoted his time and his life to putting out his book. He's up to issue #9, he has a great list of guest writers lined up for the next few issues, his comics is out when it should be. Thus, his comic is the hottest around. That's what it takes boys: reliability (with shipping and production), great artwork and fabulous stories. Take a hint. 'Nuff said.

Hey lemmings - want a degree?

Got your eye on an unrealistic deadline? Feeling insane, guilty, bloated? Well, I can help you if you are not destined to servitude.

I'm not coming back to this academic cattle stall next year because I will have graduated (maybe, if not, I'll see you at the bookstore in September.) Do you want a degree? I've got a few recommendations to lay on you lemmings.

1. No matter how broke, buy your TA a beer
2. Live in MSR or with an elderly couple
3. Avoid social parasites
4. Sell your essays
5. Buy your Prof. (ie. entertainment)
6. Call your Prof. "Doctor" - even if they don't have their Phd.
7. Only imbibe on Saturdays
8. Avoid student politics
9. Con frosh into buying Doctors notes
10. Tape soporific lectures and get some sleep

Alabama song

I had problems waking up this morning and it wasn't due to the amount of alcohol consumed the previous night. I believe my soporific state is, without mention of insomnia, due to my eventual return to the "real world."

What am I referring to? Whether we realize it or not, this semester is rapidly coming to a close and we shall soon be entertaining the job market. What job market? This is true, I worked under the table last summer slinging beer in Ottawa to bored tourists and pseudo-lobbyists. I was fortunate to have a job and the occasional tip.

It is not to say that I am afraid of the working world and all its complexities; I simply believe the majority of those functioning in this sphere are stupid. Case in point - city workers, border guards and painters guilds. It's shoddy dialectical materialism.

How many of us have to depend on OSAP to survive. I'm not going to preach about the injustices of the NDP or tuition hikes, you're by now well versed on these topics. The problem is, I believe, a lack of initiative by pizza companies and regional councilors to create temporary employment for the legions of students. OK, so working for Joey's Mighty ZA may not be the best way to subsidize an education, but it's better than soaking your parents.

Perhaps, on a serious note (I know this a flagrant violation on these entertainment pages) I will suggest that students need to incorporate themselves. For instance, the Student Lobby Opposing Bacteria Systems (SLOBS), would scrape mildew from statues and fire hydrants. Or perhaps, Student Packaging Environmental Waste (SPEW), would transport (by hand of course to reduce cost) toxic waste from various industries across the nation.

So when you wake tomorrow remember all is not lost, we have a future and it's glowing. Take pride in pauperism, it teaches you modesty and self-discipline. Walk with your chin up and fuck, who am I kidding, you're going to starve next year.

What is left, I suppose, is dealing with the they contingency.

Who decides where we work?

Who decides what we eat?

Who decides what university will accept us?

And who are they?

Fucked if I know who they are?

The Flight of the Eagle

by D.J. Zebeljan

He was just a con-man; lied to himself and all those around him. Yet he wanted to conquer the fear. He was about to fly; to spread his wings and face the absolute uncertainty.

Oh, yes, he was scared. Down the cliff, he watched his face lose its normal appearance and shape to dangerously gapping water; thus breaking it in a thousand little pieces. As soon as he moved towards the edge he knew: there was no return. He was up there for good; he was up there to defeat the fear and gain eternity. Fierce and bewildered his heart felt like it stopped. The small yet profound muscle of life grew bigger, hammering his chest and usurping his brain.

Thus, being inevitable proof of human weakening. All of a sudden in the climax of the moment, the heavens started turning around. They went around and around; the mind collapsed, and the body was overtaken by the shivering. Was he about to die or to dream death? Perhaps this was just a distorted image of the cruel reality. However, he knew one thing: that decisive afternoon, he was up against two enemies; himself and the ocean. The first one was eminent, the second one was just there.

It just stood there, opened its blue jaws, and waited for its next victim. He leaned against the rock near by and was quietly sick. He prayed to nature, or god, whichever exists; nothing is important but the cliff. What cliff? He doesn't see any cliff; where is his mother now, and Tia, are those sharks down there? No they must be whales, or maybe zebras, lions and trees... who gives a... but he does.

He already hears the bones cracking. They are ripping him apart... then, the sharks... the bloody sharks... oh, god are they ripping him. He feels the skin and muscles separating. He sees the big atrocious eyes viciously staring at the base of his skull and right through his heart. He is drowning, drowning, drowning. There is a blood pool. He is drowning in his own blood.

No, no, he starts screaming. No he doesn't want to die. He wants to jump, he wants to fly; fly like an eagle and feel the air caress him. And time has stopped. The demolition of thought existence, judgment, heart, and soul, the demolition that is, and it spells fear.

And then he silenced himself, opened his wings, and gloriously stretched. He flew. He finally flew! Down the cliff, uncertainty became certain.

As he hit the water, the sharks, whales, and the other beasts, the images of his distorted mind, and the blue jaws were all gone. The fear, their creator, as well, had gone with them. The eagle has flown and landed. Embraced by the almighty water and crisp air, he conquered the fear, and proved not to be a con-man.

Juste... Pour... Rire!

Une soirée pleine de fou rires

Carine Schlup
Rédactrice française

Samedi le 13 mars 1993 à 20h dans l'auditorium Alphonse-Raymond de l'Université Laurentienne, une salle pleine s'impatients devant une scène et une salle décorée au max. Pour la première fois les auditions Juste Pour Rire se déroulèrent à Sudbury. Le public s'était rendu en avance à la porte d'entrée, car pas tout le monde était garanti une place dans l'auditorium. Pour les malchanceux, on avait installé une télévision dans la cafétéria des Sciences de l'éducation dont était projeté l'émission en direct.

avant le spectacle, le monde a eu le temps de lire la programme et leur impatience augmenta de minute en minute. Lorsque les rideaux se levèrent, apparut un peu gêné par la masse du monde qu'il a réussi à rassembler ce soir avec son belle organisation, Luc Lalonde vice-président de l'AEF et coordinateur de la soirée. Dans un brief discours, il remercia toutes organisations et personnes impliquées dans la création de ces auditions et ensuite abandonna le public au charme de la soirée qui s'envenait.

L'animateur de la soirée fut Maxime Martin qui nous présenta un candidat après l'autre. Les juges de la soirée furent Jasmine Colizza de Juste Pour Rire, Marcel Rouleau de l'AEF, Sylvie Dufour du TNO et Dominique St-Laurent de CBON. Cette superbe soirée fut commandité par Bell Canada et fut organisée par l'AEF. Au cours de la soirée Maxime Martin disait "qu'il est presque 99.9% certain que l'année prochaine les auditions Juste Pour Rire seront de nouveau à Sudbury". si cela ne va pas être le cas, il va falloir chiâler mes amis.

Maxime Martin, 23 ans et fumeur

Carine Schlup
Rédactrice française

Les auditions Juste Pour Rire n'auraient pas été la même chose sans l'animateur Maxime Martin. C'est lui qui a échauffé un peu la salle avant les candidats et entre chaque candidat.

Voilà que ce jeune homme de 23 ans, nous vient de nulle part, et a peine sur scène qu'il captive notre attention en nous comptant très brièvement quelques histoires de sa vie. Le public vacciné contre son premier assaut, Maxime Martin se lance sans gêne dans des discours directs avec son public. Ce jeune homme n'avait pas froid aux yeux et n'hésitait pas de rappeler un spectateur au calme avec son expression "Ta yeule!" Ceci provoqua un rire commun.

Maxime Martin n'est guère un gars qui reste froid aux commentaires que le public lui lance pendant son "show" pour l'agacer. Non, il se retourne de bord et joue le jeu, avec beaucoup de succès.

que son langage fut très vulgaire et qu'elles n'ont pas pu déguster le spectacle au complet. Sur ce que Maxime Martin répond: "Je sais que je suis baveux et je peux même être encore plus baveux! Des critiques pareilles me donnent un 'Hard-on'."

En tout cas, nous les étudiants et bien d'autre avons bien aimé ta grosse gueule de la soirée.

Huit présentations furent l'amusement, et la découverte de nouveaux talents, cette soirée du samedi 13 mars 1993 aux auditions Juste Pour Rire.

Réjean Sigouin nous décrit le changement d'attitude de la femme d'hier à la femme d'aujourd'hui. Il nous montra son côté agressif qui c'est développé à travers les âges. Tout cela en nous comptant son aventure, ou rencontre avec une de ces créatures. Son final fut basé sur l'égalité de la femme et qu'elles ont la même valeur que les hommes, et qu'il est temps de le comprendre.

Nicolas Ducharme nous démontra son talent dans le domaine du chant en interprétant, en outre, Gerry par excellence! Son originalité et son talent lui ont amenés la victoire qui fut une bourse de 350$, transport et hébergement à la finale nationale à Montréal. (Prix remis par Bell Canada).

Stéphane Paquette et Mireille Dugas nous mimèrent avec beaucoup d'humour la rencontre d'un franco-ontarien avec une acadienne.

Joël Bérard a remporté les coeurs des femmes assises dans l'audience avec sa démonstration de comment devenir un gogo-boy!

Reynald Ranger, notre nouveau curé, nous présenta une messe avec beaucoup d'humour. Une de ses premières phrases: "Mon amie et moi avons fait l'humour toute la nuit."

Isabelle Perreault sans effets spéciaux, ni gêne, nous parla de la grande visite qui rend les jeunes filles...femmes!

Christian Caron en avait un problème avec sa crise de foi jusqu'à ce qu'il décida d'enlever la pierre qui s'y trouvait.

Martha Robitaille et Nathalie Robitaille nous montrèrent les désagréables rencontres que l'on peut faire dans un cinéma.

Chaque candidat a fait de son mieux et nous ont livré un spectacle inoubliable. Au plaisir de vous revoir un jour.

Éditorial: La Pourriture à l'SGA/AGE

Il y a eu de la pourriture à l'SGA/AGE lors des élections. Les moyens irresponsables et irréflectifs de M. Chapelle sont synonyme de cette pourriture. On ne cherche pas à modifier un processus électoral, au milieu d'une élection, par des moyens illégaux et irresponsables.

Vous demeurez, pour moi, M. Chapelle, quelque'un d'irresponsable, prétentieux, et non qualifié pour le poste de président de l'SGA/AGE. Vous le demeurez par cause que vous avez panifié, procédé et d'avoir briser la loi électoral de notre association.

Notez, que si vous auriez fait cela aux élections municipale, régionale ou fédérale que vous seriez entre les mains de la Gendarmerie Royale du Canada.

Encore une fois, votre attitude face aux accusations, de votre témoignage et votre comportement au conseil de l'SGA/AGE est prétentieux. Vous avez du front tout autour de la tête.

Pour regagner la confiance de la communauté universitaire, de tes membres et surtout pour l'intérêt et la réputation de l'SGA/AGE vous devriez et devez démission. en tant que Vice-président aux affaires extérieures.

Aussi, si vous vous tenez tellement à vos explications et vos actions, laissez vos membres décidés par moyen légal, soit une élection.

Vous devez démissionner en tant que Président élu 93-94 et vous présentez à l'élection partiel pour la présidence de l'SGA/AGE et faire votre cas aux membres.

Ils vous dirons ce qu'ils pensent de vous, de votre attitude, et de votre comportement lors des élections dernières.

La semaine de la femme: Un problème?

En faisant référence à l'article "An Open Letter to All Feminists (And Other Male Bashers)", je trouve que c'est vraiment exagéré et faux! Je ne comprends pas pourquoi ces gars, qui ont vraiment besoin de vieillir, ont un problème avec la semaine de la femme ou peut-être est-ce les femmes en général.

Je pourrais en nommer plus de 10 femmes influençables ou populaires, mais je n'aime autant pas perdre plus de notre temps sur vos trois!

On a une semaine contre la violence faite aux femmes. Qui pratique la violence contre la femme? Quel sexe est le plus fort physiquement? Je n'ai même pas besoin de répondre, tout le monde connaît déjà la réponse.

Concernant la liste de 10 choses à faire si les femmes veulent être égales aux hommes - cette liste vous pouvez la mettre où on pense car, si vous avez déjà eu une "date", les femmes payent et on demande même des "dates" et on ouvre même la porte aux hommes - c'est un signe de politesse les gars!

Vous avez vraiment besoin de vieillir les gars! C'est de valeur que vous avez visé la minorité de la population féministe!

Qu'est-ce qu'une amie?

Diana Fregonese
collaboratrice

Voici une définition d'une amie: Une amie, c'est quelqu'un d'aimable Qui essaie de rendre agréable ta route cahoteuse et noire Et qui mérite, à son tour, un geste semblable.

C'est aussi une personne avec laquelle on peut parler D'amour, de tristesse, de peine ou de joie Quoique ce soit, l'amie sait toujours nous écouter Et presque infailliblement, elle comprendra.

Sans cesse, elle te soutiendra Déterminée que tu regagneras ton pouvoir. En te réconfortant avec une chaleureuse caresse d'argent, L'amie te fait connaître le sens de la victoire.

Alors, lorsque la vie te décourage,

Va te consoler avec une véritable amie, un rayon de soleil, Qui t'éclairera, en te libérant de l'orage Puis, grâce à son conseil, ta vie ressemblera à un arc-en-ciel. La mission d'une sincère:

De la Poésie

rendre beau ce qui est laid, Convertir le coeur des gens amères. Et lorsque ceci sera accompli, tout le monde sait... Qu'apparaîtra une colombe blanche, en signe de PAIX!

Un mariage, une nouvelle vie! Un lien éternel pour leur lune de miel d'un an. Je ne les ai pas vu depuis ce temps-là. Mais, il semblerait que c'est la femme qui travaille et que l'homme doit rester à la maison pour nettoyer et garder tout en ordre. Les rôles sont inversés pour une fois!

Mais, selon mon cousin, ce n'est pas tout méchant. Il peut aller à la pêche et jouer au golf presque chaque jour de la semaine.

Belle histoire, non? Est-ce une réalité ou seulement mon imagination? Le seul qui le sait vraiment c'est moi! Et si vous pensez que je vais le dire, vous avez tort mes chers et mes chères.

À la prochaine, ne vous emmerdez pas trop sur cette histoire!

Photos prises par Kevin Perrault

Le mariage est une institution sacrée. C'est une chose qui nous change même si l'on ne s'en aperçoit pas! Le mariage canadien français est unique. Si vous avez déjà fait parti de ce genre de mariage vous allez comprendre ce que je vais vous expliquer.

J'ai assisté un mariage ce Noël dernier. Mon cousin, Steve, c'est marié avec sa blonde, France. Ils sont sortis ensemble pendant 10 ans avant de décider de vouloir s'emmerder pour le restant de leur vie. Et quand ils ont pris la décision "fatale", il n'avait à peine qu'un mois à se préparer.

Ce fut un mois très mouvementé pour les familles des deux côtés. Mais la journée est arrivée et le tout c'est passé merveilleusement. J'ai même eu l'honneur de lire un poème devant les invités. Tout le monde était nerveux, je n'ai jamais vu mon cousin dans un état pareille. Mais aussitôt que le premier bec des mariés fut une réalité, la nervosité disparut, et la fête commença!

Nous avons mangé un goûté chez les parents de la mariée, pour ensuite se rencontrer dans un merveilleux petit restaurant. Le seul problème fut la chaleur! Mais, les mariés n'eurent aucun problème car ils ont dû rester debout pendant plus de deux heures pour accepter les félicitations. La bouffe arriva enfin et nous avons mangé un superbe souper!

Peu après le souper, la danse commença. Et au plein milieu de la soirée, le "couple" a dû écouter un résumé de leur vie. Ce fut très plaisant de les voir surpris de certaines choses inoubliables qui furent dites juste pour les embarrassés. Je ne suis pas cruel, au contraire ils ont bien aimé se faire taquiner.

Après le tout, les amoureux sont partis au Texas aux États-Unis

Comment trouver un livre idéal? Un livre qui vous intéresse, qui vous captive qui sait comment vous faire rêver. Tout dépend quelle sorte de livre vous cherchez! Si vous cherchez un livre simple et peu coûteux, vous allez probablement vous rendre dans un magasin du coin. Si vous cherchez un livre ordinaire vous allez aux ventes aux enchères. Si vous désirez un livre usé et que vous voulez seulement l'emprunter vous vous rendez tout simplement à la bibliothèque. Si vous cherchez quelque chose de rare... Ben là, il va falloir que vous vous rendiez à un musée.

Mais pourquoi tous ces goûts différents? Tout simplement parce qu'il y a des personnes qui préfèrent des couvertures lisses, rugueuse, cartonnées, épaisses et parfois tout simplement neuves. Mais ceci est seulement l'aspect extérieur. Qu'en est-il de l'intérieur? Tout dépend quel niveau de suspense, romance, épouvante, drame, éducation etc... vous désirez.

Suspense est le livre dans lequel on ne sait jamais ce qui va arrivé et on se pose toujours la question: "Est-ce que cela va se produire ou non?" ou alors la question: "Qui est la salle frippouille qui a osé!"

Les livres de romance garantis un bon sommeil. Tout se déroule très lentement et dans l'amour s'il vous plaît! Parfois, il faut presque se demander "Quand est-ce que l'on passe à l'action?" Parfois, c'est presque à désespérer.

Les livres d'épouvante sont très très intéressants mais il faut avoir un coeur solide sinon vive la crise cardiaque. Ce livre ne vous fait pas poser des questions, vous allez tout simplement souhaiter en sortir vivant. Car la plupart du temps quand on réalise le danger c'est trop tard "Oh non voilà que le zombie MTS arrive... Oh... maman à moi!"

Les livres de drame sont bien comiques "Oh non pourquoi suis-je venue... si seulement... j'avais su..." Le moral a plat garanti!

Et les livres d'éducation! Ce ne sont sûrement pas les dernières catégories mais après celle-ci je n'aurai guère envie d'en élaborer d'autre! Il faut que je vous avoue que je trouve ces livres très ennuyeux. Ils sont tout simplement trop terre à terre et veulent toujours t'apprendre quelque chose de nouveau! Imaginez, tu veux rêver un peu et voilà ce que tu lis: "Quand dans l'angle A quel est le vecteur..."

Je vous l'ai bien dit, il faut être maso pour ces livres-là! En tout cas chacun son choix. Et j'aimerais ajouter ceci: c'est pas juste de regarder la dernière page avant de commencer le livre. Ça c'est le risque de lire un livre. Car le livre n'est pas un fruit qu'on tourne et retourne entre nos mains avant d'y croquer dedans. Alors à la prochaine et bonne lecture!

Un nouveau président ravive les espoirs PROMESSES POUR HAÏTI

Nathalie Sobitaille
Pris de Montréal Campus Vol.13, no 9 du
3 février 1993

Le jeune candidat démocrate avait promis d'assouplir la politique de rapatriement des réfugiés haïtiens, mise en place par son prédécesseur. Craignant un flux important de "boat people", le nouveau leader américain a plutôt enforcé la surveillance à l'aide d'un blocus naval autour de l'île.

Michel Sanon, porteparole du ralliement des étudiants et étudiantes pour Haïti, soutient que le blocus a incité le général Raoul Cédras à accepter la proposition de l'ONU et de l'OEA, en ce qui concerne l'envoi d'une mission civile en Haïti, pour le respect des droits de la personne et le retour à la démocratie. M. Sanon juge cette présence internationale nécessaire mais précise que les observateurs doivent provenir de différents pays: "Il ne s'agit pas d'envoyer une surveillance américaine, car ce serait tout comme donner la responsabilité d'un fromage à un rat."

Selon M. Daniel Holly, professeur à l'UQAM en sciences politiques d'origine haïtienne, le blocus a paradoxalement un effet bénéfique pour l'évolution politique d'Haïti puisque "les gens insatisfaits sont obligés de se battre pour changer la situation."

M. Holly croit le gouvernement américain est conscient que la solution au problème des réfugiés de la mer réside dans le retour du président et non dans ce blocus naval très coûteux qui ne représente "qu'une situation temporaire".

Sans être toutefois trop optimiste, il considère que le déploiement d'une mission civile pourrait se révéler le fer de lance "d'un dispositif d'aide humanitaire intelligente".

Retour en arrière

Le père Jean-Bertrand aristide, premier président élu depuis trente-cinq ans en Haïti, avait récolté 67% des suffrages lors des élections du 16 décembre 1990. Le coup d'État orchestré par la junte militaire, neuf mois plus tard, a obligé le président à s'exiler. La communauté internationale, l'ONU et l'OEA avaient immédiatement condamné le push. Pourtant seize mois plus tard, le gouvernement de fait règne en maître et sème une terreur effroyable dans la population. Les atrocités commises par ce régime militaire rappellent l'époque duvalérienne. Certains parlent de trois milles victimes et d'autres de sept milles.

La mission qui partira prochainement pour Haïti n'est pas la première du genre. Celle-ci pourrait toutefois amener des résultats plus concrets en raison de l'apparente volonté de négocier du général Cédras. Cette soudaine ouverture semble être une conséquence directe de l'arrivée au pouvoir de Bill Clinton et de sa promesse de restaurer la démocratie en Haïti.

Pourtant la journaliste Marie-Célie Agnant, d'origine haïtienne également, déclare n'avoir aucunement confiance en cette mission. "L'ONU et l'OEA sont des organisations infodées aux É.-U.", affirme-t-elle, soulignant qu'Haïti souffre des maux engendrés par la politique américaine et cela depuis très longtemps. En effet, les É.-U. ont occupé le pays de 1915 à 1934 et ont soutenu la dictature des Duvalier durant vingt-neuf ans.

Elle croit fermement qu'un campagne est actuellement menée aux É.-U. dans le but de minimiser les crimes des putschistes. Ainsi ces derniers pourraient bénéficier d'une amnistie advenant le retour d'Aristide. Elle souligne le fait que les armes et le pétrole ont continué d'entrer au pays malgré l'embargo imposé par l'OEA.

M. Sanon admet que les É.-U. n'ont pas respecté l'embargo contre Haïti, qui aurait pu faire fléchir l'armée et la classe aisée et assurer ainsi le retour d'Aristide: "Les militaires et la bourgeoisie, sans pétrole et électricité, n'auraient pu profiter du luxe qu'ils connaissent actuellement. Ils n'auraient pas accepté que leur niveau de vie s'abaisse au niveau de celui de la masse populaire et ils auraient déguerpi." Mais pour lui, cette mission permettra au peuple haïtien de mener sa lutte au grand jour. Car jusqu'à maintenant, la répression armée a empêché la population de manifester librement.

Le courrier du pervers

Cher Pervers,

J'ai de la difficulté avec les capotes! Je n'aime pas du tout la senteur du caoutchouc brûlé. Cette senteur m'écoeure tellement que ça me coupe l'envie de jouer au sport matelat. Puis ma blonde veut m'abandonner maintenant car elle dit que je ne joue plus au sport matelat.

Le capoté

Cher capoté

Je sais qu'on ne peut pas toujours avoir un rhume pour ne pas sentir cette odeur de caoutchouc. Mais ne saviez-vous pas qu'il y a des comdon avec des odeurs spéciaux.

Le pervers

Ayoye,

J'ai fait l'amour à ma blonde, mais en terminant nous ne pouvions plus nous séparer. Nos hanches étaient prise dans une position très inconfortable. J'étais pris dans la forêt. Ceci nous a fait très mal, mais ce fut le meilleur plaisir qu'on a eu depuis très longtemps. Comment allons-nous faire pour arriver au septième ciel encore une fois?

Le sado-maso dodo

Cher sado-maso-dodo

On dit normalement que si le plaisir était tellement grand qu'on se pose pas la question deux fois si on veut recommencer ou non. Il faut savoir prendre un certain risque... Si cette réponse ne te satisfait pas, va voir un médecin.

Le pervers

Aidez-moi,

J'ai rencontré une fille une semaine passée. J'ai eu la soirée parfaite avec elle hier soir. Nous avons eu un souper romantique et ensuite nous nous sommes installés devant le foyer. Je vous laisse imaginer ce qui c'est passé! Le lendemain, elle ne voulait rien savoir de moi! Elle ne m'a pas donné d'explication. Qu'est-ce que je fais maintenant? Je me sens user!

L'user

Cher User

Utilise quelqu'un à ton tour! Si t'es aussi romantique que tu le prétend il va falloir que tu te méfie un peu plus.

Le pervers

Cher Pervers,

J'ai un vrai problème. Voici 2 ans que je sort avec une femme que j'adore par dessus tout. Mais voilà que la semaine dernière elle m'a dit qu'elle voulait me laisser parce que je ne la satisfais pas pendant l'acte sexuel! La raison est que je ne suis pas capable de maintenir mon érection jusqu'à son plaisir. Pas parce que je ne tient pas le coup mais parce que j'éclate toujours de rire lorsque je vois les grimaces qu'elle fait lorsqu'elle s'approche de son point d'extase. J'ai déjà pensé de changer de position mais elle ne consente pas. Et moi je ne peux pas lui expliquer de peur de l'insulter. Que puis-je bien faire?

Le rieur

Cher rieur

As-tu déjà pensé de porter des masques pendant l'acte sexuel. Tu peux aussi fermer les yeux quand tu sens qu'elle s'approche de son point de grimace. Mais ça me surprend que tu n'as pas encore réussi à t'habituer.

Le Sida est le syndrome d'immunodéficience acquise qui est provoqué par le virus d'immunodéficience humaine (VIH). On estime que plus de 70 000 canadiens sont infectés par le VIH et le nombre de cas de Sida a atteint 6 906.

Le Sida est une maladie qui affecte l'humanité entière. L'éducation du Sida vise tout le monde: Chaque culture, chaque sexe, chaque orientation sexuelle. Tous peuvent prendre des précautions pour prévenir le Sida. Alors, il est nécessaire d'apprendre plus à propos du Sida.

Mais les personnes qui renseignent sur le Sida doivent combattre l'ignorance. Quelques fois, ils doivent utiliser un matériel controversé qui peut offenser les gens. L'éducation qui choque est très efficace - il attire l'attention de l'audience, et en même temps il les instruit.

Le 21 mars 1991, Lambda publia "A Gay Man's Guide to safer Erotic Sex." Deux années plus tard, la controverse est passée, mais il est à espérer que son message est toujours clair.

On doit se souvenir que la défense ultime contre le Sida est l'éducation et la prévention. Le silence est la mort. Le Sida est un meurtrier brutal que nous craignons.

Nous ne devons pas perdre de vue cette perspective.

Malgré les statistiques et ses conséquences, le Sida continue à se propager. Mais ne considérez pas les statistiques parce qu'en général, la société ne pense pas à ça.

Alors, imaginez quelqu'un qui souffre. Mais imaginez que vous aimez cette personne. Imaginez que c'est la douleur la plus atroce pour vous.

Imaginez que vous êtes: un amant, une femme, un frère, une mère...

Imaginez que la personne que vous aimez souffre à cause du Sida.

Maintenant, imaginez que vous ne pouvez rien faire pour le sauver...

Encore, Encore, Encore...

Le spectacle de la "troupe" universitaire

Pierre J. Perreault collaborateur

Extraordinaire! Mardi le 9 mars, à l'auditorium Alphonse-Raymond, la troupe de théâtre universitaire a présenté un spectacle inoubliable, intitulé "On tient parole".

Ils se sont tenu au titre du spectacle. Ils ont tenu parole! Si vous aviez eu la malchance d'avoir manqué cette présentation, vous avez manqué un spectacle qui débordait de talent.

L'idée derrière cette pièce de théâtre était de mettre en musique, et en chant quelques poèmes franco-ontariens célèbres notamment de Jean-Marc Dalpé, Patrice Desbiens, Brigitte Haentjens et bien d'autres.

Pour moi, les scènes que j'ai appréciées étaient celle des mineurs, de la petite fille qui est symbole de la relève et enfin la chanson de Serge Monette (vau-vont) avec la scène du vieillard.

La mine d'un garçon qui se prépare pour rencontrer une fille au rythme de la musique était excellent. Bravo Stéphane et Mireille! Le chant de la pièce théâtrale était passionné et mouvementé.

J'ai grandement apprécié cette pièce de théâtre. Je crois fermement que si on mesure le talent artistique contre le T.N.O., je crois que le T.N.O. vient juste de découvrir une compétition. La "troupe" universitaire vient d'apporter quelque chose d'important à la communauté franco-ontarienne de l'Université, un véhicule pour s'affirmer. Bravo à tous! et Merde!

Francophone de la Laurentienne: Quel avenir?

Joël A. Bombo-Konghauzaud collaborateur

Ce titre doit paraître surprenant pour certaines personnes et ce, à juste titre.

Je pose cette question car le mercredi 3 mars, j'ai surpris une conversation dans l'ascenseur classant les francophones parmi les espèces en voie de disparition. Eh oui!!! Ce jugement est-il justifié ou non? Grande question dont la réponse ne viendra que des francophones eux-mêmes sous forme d'actes concrets.

À première vue, ce débat ne devrait pas être mon problème pour plusieurs raisons: d'abord je suis africain et je possède une langue maternelle dont la structure n'a rien à voir avec le français. La raison pour laquelle je défends la langue de Molière, Voltaire, Montesquieu et même Léopold Sedar Senghor (premier africain à entrer à l'académie française) est que je l'utilise pour étudier et surtout communiquer avec mes amis franco-canadiens.

Ces individus, que j'apprécie sur plusieurs plans ne peuvent être traités avec autant de désinvolture sans réaction appropriée. Je n'ai aucune prétention de démêler l'écheveau que constitue le contentieux linguistique francophone- anglophone mais je voudrais simplement dire qu'il appartient aux francophones de montrer leur vitalité en s'organisant plus efficacement au sein de l'université Laurentienne

Un seul exemple avant de terminer: l'A.G.E. (l'Association générale des étudiants) est-elle une chasse gardée anglophone?

Quel est ton opinion à l'égard de la violence faite aux gays et aux lesbiennes?

Manon Rousseau

"Je trouve que la violence est mal pour n'importe qui. La discrimination faite à eux est mal. Il devrait exister des moyens de protéger tout le monde. Ils ne devraient pas provoquer par exemple, je sais qu'ils sont sujet [...] qu'il y a beaucoup de monde qui sont contre eux. Je suis contre la violence."

Marc Larivière

2e année droit et justice et philosophie

"Je suis complètement contre la violence faite aux homosexuelles parce qu'ils sont des personnes. Je suis contre la violence contre les femmes et les homosexuelles pareillement."

Steve Langdon

3e année psychologie

"Je trouve que c'est une injustice qui se passe de nos jours dans notre société. Je suis pas d'accord, pentoute je trouve qu'il devrait avoir plus de groupe d'action contre ce genre de violence. Il y a plus de groupe d'appui à l'Université au sujet de la violence contre les lesbiennes et gays. Il y a trop de monde qui sont pas assez éduquer au sujet. Et il y a pas assez de monde qui respecte le fait que différentes personnes peuvent avoir différents intérêts sexuels. C'est l'ignorance comme tel."

Daniel Charbonneau

2e année de commerce

"C'est déployable. Ils sont des personnes comme nous le sommes. Je trouve que n'importe quel violence contre les personnes n'est pas acceptable."

Women's Intramural Ice Hockey Comes To A Close

The Women's Intramural Ice Hockey League came to a close Sunday as the U of S Stokers claimed first place by one point over the SSR Sharks with an impressive overall record of 7-0-1.

The Stokers defeated the UC Fallen Angels 12-0 on goals by Lorraine McMahon (4), Heather Millard (3) who won the league scoring title, Lyse Fortin (2), Denise Carriere, Chantelle Bergeron, and Chantelle Robitaille, with Elaine Caron recording the shutout. This victory ensured the Stokers an undefeated season along with the league title.

In the last game of the season, the SSR Sharks and the UC Bratpack hooked up for what was a goaltending battle and rights to second place. The goaltenders for both teams kept their respective teams in the game early, but the Sharks broke the scoreless tie late in the first period with a goal by Sheri O'Reilly. The Sharks extended their lead to two when Karen Jagges bulged the twine early in the second period, but a few seconds later, Amy Smith of the Bratpack scored her twentieth goal of the season to cut the lead to 2-1. The Sharks then put the game out of reach when Karen Stoffers scored, giving the Sharks a 3-1 victory and second place overall. The SSR Sharks ended the season with a very respectable 6-0-2 overall record.

The Bratpack's loss combined with a 5-2 victory by the SSR Shooters over the Huntington Hawks meant that there was a tie for third place. The tie was broken by the fact that the Bratpack had defeated the Shooter earlier in the season thus giving them the bronze medal.

The convenors would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the participants and coaches for helping to make this year so great! The convenors would also like to take this time to thank the sponsors of Women's Intramural Ice Hockey for their support and contributions:

- End OF Season -

Women's Intramural Basketball

by Keith Zufelt and Karen Stoffers

The women's intramural basketball playoffs wrapped up just before Spring break. Throughout the season there were some close and exciting games, however, the most exciting game of the season was played on February 2, 1993. The Combos defeated the SSR Shooters sinking their last basket as the buzzer sounded. The final score was Combos 41 to the Shooter 39. This also guaranteed the Combos a spot in the finals. The second game that evening saw U of S Stokers burying Awesome 52 to 22, and in the final game of the evening, PHADs were knocked out of playoff competition by the Huntington Hawks 40 to 34.

During semi-final action which took place on February 9, 1993, the Huntington Hawks won both of their first games to earn them a place in the finals. Their first match was against U of S Stokers who had their season ended; they were defeated 47 to 37. In their second game that evening they were able to outshoot the SSR Shooters 54 to 45. Thus knocking the Shooters into third place overall.

Finally, Championship Day

arrived on February 11th. The undefeated Combos were placed against the hard playing Huntington Hawks. However, due to circumstances, the Combos had only five players to face the Hawks' nine players. The scoring was opened up by the Combos but the Hawks were quick to retaliate. After a great burst, the Combos were able to fight back and bring the game to a tie. Unfortunately this was short-lived as the Hawks captured the lead by the close of the first half. With no substitutions, the Combos made the best of their situation, as the Hawks with their fresh players broke the game wide open in the second half. The final score was Huntington Hawks 42 to the Combos 17.

As the convenors we would like to extend a special thank you to Peter Ennis and the Women's Basketball team for providing referees at most of the games. We would also like to congratulate all of the teams and thank them for their cooperation. There was some great competition and a good time was had by all. Also thanks to Dorothy Pitzel and Leak for their guidance and patience. λ

Intramural Men's Basketball Closes Another Successful Season

The 1992/93 Intramural Men's Basketball season officially came to an end on February 23 with the running of both the "A" and "B" division finals. Previously, the semi-finals occurred during the week prior Spring break.

In the "A" division, Northern Heat defeated the league-leading Italian Flyers, in a stunning upset. Although the Flyers did not play a poor game overall, as does usually happen in an upset, the play and shooting of the Northern Heat was truly remarkable and unmatched on this night. The game ended with the Heat winning 60-55. The second semi-final between T.C.O.B. (Taking Care of Business) and the Huntington Hawks was also a close game throughout, with T.C.O.B. pulling away at the end to take the game 54-35.

The "B" division also held some heated action. In the first semi league-leaders, Rico's Rebounders had their hands full with the 7th floor Hounds. The lead changed hands on numerous occasions before the Rebounders finally put away the stubborn Hounds 39-35. In the second semi, favoured Twisted Steel & Sex Appeal had control of the game throughout as they advanced to the final with a 58-35 victory over the T-Birds.

The finals in both divisions took place immediately after spring break. With the full gym, three-point shooting, and more time available for play, the stage was set for a couple of high scoring games.

The "B" division final pitted Rico's Rebounders against Twisted Steel & Sex Appeal. The Rebounders had defeated the Twisted ones earlier on in the regular season and they were ready to invoke some twisted revenge. The game was a close one throughout, with Rico's Rebounders keeping a tender lead for the duration. In the end, time ran out for Twisted Steel as Rico's took the game 62-53. The "A" final was truly an exciting game pitting the young Northern Heat against the veteran, ex-varsity T.C.O.B. (Taking Care Of Business) tea. After a slow start for both teams, T.C.O.B. jumped out to a quick lead. The Heat responded however, and caught up to their opponents. This was the scenario during the entire game, where T.C.O.B. would take a big lead and the Heat would then bounce back to close the gap, and even take the lead on a couple of occasions. In the end however, time ran out on the Heat as T.C.O.B.'s high-powered offense geared them to 115-93 victory. The game was marked by high scoring, ushered by plenty of three point baskets, consistent free throw shooting, and great passing skills, on both sides. Congratulations to both winning teams.

It was an overall successful year for men's intramural basketball. There was a little rough play and great determination and competition displayed by those who participated. Much thanks go out to Peter Campbell and the Men's Varsity Basketball team for conducting the refereeing duties, to Dorothy Pitzel and the entire Physical Education department staff for their help in making the convenors' jobs easier, and to all the players who demonstrated superior basketball skills and sportsmanship throughout the entire season.

Veas Battle for Bronze in Victoria

by Dan Scott

I've got to say it — I thought Veas Victorious in Victoria would have made a much catchier title. Unfortunately, reality failed to correspond to fantasy. Courtesy of a second-round upset performed by wildcard entry Victoria on home turf, the Lady Veas Basketball team played for and won CIAU bronze on Sunday, March 14th.

A brief look at the weekend's results: Friday night, the ladies downed seventh-ranked McGill 84-65. Saturday night, a strong Victoria team managed to topple LU's house of cards with a 70-54 victory. Sunday morning saw the Veas rally from the upset to crush Lethbridge 85-57 and bring bronze back to Sudbury.

Laurentian also brought back an All-Canadian and an All-Star, in the person of Dianne Norman. Congratulations on a fine tournament and season!

Friday night brought the Veas up against the McGill Martlets, who sank the first three baskets of the game before Laurentian responded. McGill tried to remain the aggressor, but just couldn't deal with the psyched and strong LU squad. At the half, the score was 46-38 in our favour, and at the final; buzzer the Veas had outpaced the Martlets to a 84-65 finish. Top contributors of the game were Sue Stewart with 21 points and Martha Sandilands with 16, while Dianne Norman had 14 points and brought down an incredible 16 boards!

Saturday saw Victoria "play the game of their life," according to Lady Veas coach Peter Ennis. That's nice for Victoria, but unfortunately the game was against a Voyager team suffering an off-night. Laurentian's 17 turnovers looked good in comparison to Victoria's 23, but unfortunately "Victoria capitalized on every take we made ... [while] our offense was tentative," said Ennis.

Tentative is a nice way of putting it — our girls were shooting 33% from the field, in comparison to Victoria's 60% from both the field and the three-point range. The score reflected the discrepancy: at the half, Vic led 36-30. Despite about ten minutes of good basketball on the Veas part in the second half, Victoria blew off our efforts to give a final score of 70-54.

"We just weren't playing our game."

The Veas found their game once again on Sunday morning, in the bronze medal match against Lethbridge. Our team heard the wake-up call for an 11:00AM game after the loss at 10:30PM the night before, and quickly put their disappointment behind them and concentrated on playing good basketball. It was some consolation knowing that Lethbridge had knocked Victoria out of some qualification for the finals, making them rely on a wildcard entry, and so the Voyageurs proceeded to tear Lethbridge apart.

At the half, the Veas were up by 16 with 39 points. They continued at a similar pace through the second half to make the tally 85-57 in our favour. Sue Stewart kicked in an amazing 33 points that game(!), followed by Dianne with 21 and Tracey Hayman with 15.

Ennis described the tournament as "two nights of great basketball, and one mediocre night...we had to rely on our bench and they played well." Rookies Karen Arnott, Stacey Hann and Mel Rathbone were noted as playing especially effectively. More good news: it's possible that this year's team will be back again next year — apparently every member still retains eligibility.

Well, I guess that just about wraps up the season. I'd like to thank the entire Lady Veas Basketball Team for giving us great basketball this year. Congratulations on achieving the bronze medal and for once again making Laurentian a name to be respected. It's been a lot of fun!

The Month of Fasting

Ramadhan is the month of fasting in Islam. Fasting is one of the five pillars of Islam. In order they are Kalima (faith); Salath (prayer); Swam (fasting); Zakath (poor due); and Haj (pilgrimage to Mecca). This is the month in which the Holy Koran descended to earth, hence the holy month.

As a command of Allah fasting is compulsory for any healthy adult Muslim. Currently Ramadhan started on Feb. 22 with the sighting of the new moon. Because the lunar calendar is followed in Islam the fasting changes days every year (the lunar calendar is 11 days shorter than the solar calendar). In the last week of Ramadhan, Muslims pay Zakath, the poor due. They calculate 2.5 per cent of their legal earnings, accumulated wealth, jewelry, assets, ect., and it is distributed among the poor and needy community.

curs where a prayer is equal to the prayer of one thousand months. The day falls in the odd days of the last ten days of Ramadhan, these days are generally spent in prayers, meditation, and in seclusion.

In breaking fast, Muslims invite one another and gather as a small get-together in one's place of choice or in Masjid (Prayer Hall of Muslims). They say a small prayer and break the fast. Generally people break the fast with their family members, not only elders, but also children of about 7 years of age and up observe fasting!

Islam bridges across the race, colour, nationality, languages and the like. It preaches unity, equality, and universal brotherhood. As the religious practices are closely linked to the day-to-day life, apart from being a religion, Islam is a way of life.

In this month, one night oc-

It's Exam Time Again, Are You Ready?

Isn't it great? Another year is about to end and with that come yet another four month break: summer. But wait a minute, there is still another step we must conquer before all of it can take place: exams. Yes, exam time is just around the corner and that is usually when everybody seems anxious. Well, guess what? It is both natural and normal to feel some anxiety before tests and exams. A moderate degree of anxiety is desirable because it tells you that your body and mind are alert and ready for action. The best thing to do is accept your anxious feelings for what they are, physiological indicators of your state of arousal. There is no need to panic and give up because you feel anxious.

A person can therefore develop either a negative or a positive attitude to examinations.

A positive attitude includes:

- 1) An expectation that the test is a challenge that you can face with confidence because you have prepared properly.
- 2) Viewing a test or exam as an opportunity to demonstrate your knowledge and competence.
- 3) Viewing tests as an opportunity for self-assessment, ie. as a learning tool.

On the other hand, a negative attitude includes:

- 1) Fear of being tested because you know that you are not prepared.
- 2) Indifference to testing and studying in general. Indifference is often a defence mechanism employed by us to reduce our anxiety.
- 3) The tendency to find fault with your instructors, with course material, or with test questions, etc. Fault finding with others is another defensive maneuver to avoid finding one's shortcomings.

As you can see, the best attitude to develop is a positive one. Once this is accomplished, the next step is to prepare yourself for the exams, and that is reviewing. Stay tuned for the next edition and we will talk about how and what you can do to prepare yourself efficiently.
